

REGIONAL VISION ZERO POLICY

Summary

The Houston–Galveston region (eight-county Metropolitan Planning area) suffers over 600 traffic fatalities annually. This loss of human life is unacceptable and preventable. The State of Texas has adopted a policy to eliminate traffic fatalities state-wide, and cities and counties in Texas are taking similar positions.

One of the primary goals of the 2045 Regional Transportation Plan is to improve transportation safety. Accordingly, supporting safety projects and programs through the MPO and other regional entities will further this goal.

Current Situation

On May 19, 2019, the Texas Transportation Commission formally adopted the Road to Zero policy and instructed the Texas Department of Transportation to devise strategies for eliminating all traffic fatalities in Texas by 2050.

On August 13, 2019 the City of Houston Mayor Sylvester Turner issued an executive order for the creation of a City Vision Zero Action Plan. On June 9, 2020 the City of Houston officially launched its vision zero campaign with the goal of eliminating traffic fatalities in the City by 2030.

On October 8, 2019, Harris County Commissioners Court adopted a Vision Zero order. On August 11, 2020, Harris County launched its Vision Zero campaign in coordinated with the City of Houston's campaign covering the unincorporated areas of Harris County.

A resolution on the elimination of traffic fatalities throughout the eight-county region by 2050 is in the attachment. This resolution was recommended by the Transportation Safety Committee at the meeting in September
